Your Last Name

Dear CEIA Members,

I am very honored to have been selected as president of CEIA. As a former cooperative education student, employer, and now a faculty advisor, I want to continue to give back to a profession that has had such a profound impact on my life. My tenure in CEIA has allowed me to do this and I look forward to the work we can do in the next year. CEIA allows us to share our collective wisdom and not only raises us as individuals, but our profession, to a higher level.

Last year, Margie Apel, CEIA Past-President, started us on a strategic development path. The Board spent two meetings planning, creating tasks lists, and then assigning responsibility. The Board is hard at work putting together committees and plans to move forward with the plan. The Board will be meeting this summer, with a big focus on strategic plans and accomplishments. We have already moved forward on a few items:

Survey of the Profession - Collecting data from the field regarding trends in cooperative education and internships (if you have not yet completed this survey, there is a link on the main CEIA web page). Thank you to Sheri Dressler and Ray Easterlin for their hard work on this survey!

National Co-op and Internship Program Directory - Creating a list of co-op education and internship programs across the US as a resource for both academia and employers. Thank you to Phil Gardner and his MSU team for pulling this together!

CEIA will be losing our dedicated CEIA Association Management Firm, The Dobbs Group, in the fall. Deborah Dobbs and Mary Ann Kane have been wonderful assets to CEIA and we will miss working with them. The CEIA Executive Committee is hard at work on a Request for Proposals (RFP) for a replacement. This RFP will be sent out to the membership shortly.

Unfortunately, the CEIA website was hacked in June and a virus was planted on several pages; it was flagged by Google as a site of concern. The website has been completely cleaned and Google has been contacted to remove this designation. If you still see this designation, please don't be alarmed, the site is clean.

CEIA was honored as an inductee into the University of Cincinnati Cooperative Education Hall of Fame in June 2007 (see the pictures and article on page 8). CEIA is one of only 17 inductees to date. Thank you to the Hall of Honor Trustees for this recognition. A highlight of this event was meeting Roy Wooldridge, CEIA founding member and second president of CEIA (and his two lovely daughters). I overheard many wonderful stories shared between Roy and Sam Sovilla (another inductee) about CEIA's history and some of its founding members. Please join me in congratulating both Roy and Sam for their induction into the Hall of Honor.

The end of the spring semester brought back a memory of when I was a graduating from college. My parents took my cooperative education advisor, Jim Slick, of Penn State, out to dinner. I can remember him talking so fondly of the co-op community and those from which he had learned. He said, "This is the best job in the whole world." I whole heartedly agree!

Sincerely,

Anita

Meet Our New CEIA President

Anita M. Todd

Assistant Professor, Division of Professional Practice, University of Cincinnati

Anita Todd at the CEIA 2007 Dallas Conference banquet after becoming President.

Anita has been on the CEIA board since 2002. Anita is very proud of her many accomplishments in support of CEIA such as web development and management, extensive work in marketing and membership for the organization, conversion of the Journal from paper to online, and her significant involvement in the 2006 and 2007 conference planning. Anita was awarded the 2004 Dean Herman Schneider Award by CEIA.

Anita has been involved with all three corners of the cooperative education triad. Before becoming an Assistant Professor at UC, she was the Director of the Engineering Cooperative Education and Internship Program at Penn State, she employed and trained cooperative education students while a product development engineer with Cummins Engine Company in Jamestown, NY, and she was a cooperative education student as a mechanical engineering undergrad at Penn State, where she graduated with a BSME in 1989.

Anita has been actively involved in many local, regional, and national cooperative education organizations. She has presented and held board positions in the American Society of Engineering Education Cooperative Education Division (ASEE/CED), and the Pennsylvania Association for Colleges and Employers (PennACE). She is a member of the Ohio Cooperative Education Association (OCEA). Anita also has an interest in attracting more women to engineering and technology fields, and is the faculty advisor the UC Society of Women Engineers (SWE) section, as well as an officer in the local and Regional professional sections. Anita is currently pursuing her Doctorate of Education at UC.

Anita is married to Doug Todd (who she met on co-op), has two sons, one dog, and one beautiful granddaughter. She enjoys golf, volleyball, gardening, movies, and theater.

Survey of the Profession

Please take the time to complete the CEIA sponsored Survey of the Profession (it is open for completion through August 2007).

We are still actively collecting data for the 2005/2006 academic year, and the initial response has been phenomenal, but we have more than 200 member institutions, and would love to see you all represented.

If you already started completing the survey, we encourage you to go back in and finish.

2007 Two-Year College Student Achievement Award

Lena Kachinski, Journalism, College of DuPage

Employer: The Jerusalem Post Christian Edition, Jerusalem, Israel

Lena Kachinski was unable to attend the conference to receive her award.

Lena Kachinski, 24, from Willow Springs, Illinois, held a 2006 internship in Jerusalem, Israel, as a staff writer for The Jerusalem Post Christian Edition, a monthly publication of the JPOST group. She also wrote scripts for Front Page Jerusalem Radio.

"While I had not intended to stay in Israel or search for an internship, I realized I could still take distance learning in college and felt it was the right thing to do," she says.

Her first article was about an 84-year-old missionary to Israel. Her most recent post-internship work is a "Back to the Border" documentary on Israel's war with the Lebanese terrorist group Hezbollah.

As the internship ended, Lena says she saw amazing differences in her writing, and in herself. She no longer spent hours trying to write creatively and efficiently, or made excuses for missed deadlines. "Somewhere along the line, I began to care about what I was doing," she says.

Her internship faculty adviser at College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, Illinois, was Cathy Stablein, a professor of journalism.

DANIEL A. SCHOCH, P.E.—2007 CHARLES F. KETTERING AWARD

Daniel A. Schoch, right, receiving the award from Anita Todd

Daniel A. Schoch is Registered Professional Engineer, and a lifelong resident of Ohio. He is a Mechanical Engineering graduate of Ohio State University. During Dan's educational years, he was an intern and cooperative education student with the Minster Machine Company, of Minster Ohio, a world leading manufacturer of high speed mechanical metal-forming presses.

Dan has personally hired and mentored well over 100 engineering students, providing over 250,000 hours of industry experience for them, of which 95% have graduated with engineering degrees, 95% remain in Ohio, and 95% remain within the manufacturing career field.

Dan's professional career with Minster now spans 37 years and includes design, development, research and advanced technologies expertise, and continues with challenging and leading edge engineering research management, technologies development, and strategic innovation, as well as continuing future workforce development efforts.

In addition to directing over 1000 developmental research programs, and achieving 27 U.S. patents along the way, Dan has lead Minster's technical workforce development for over 25 years, and has personally hired and mentored well over 100 engineering students, providing over 250,000 hours of industry experience for them, of which 95% have graduated with engineering degrees, 95% remain in Ohio, and 95% remain within the manufacturing career field. Dan's efforts include working with 17 universities and 45 area high schools to identify top talent for technical career opportunities. He has also been invited to provide input to state-level programs for workforce development and student opportunities.

Dan was unable to attend the CEIA Annual Conference, therefore, he received his award at the Annual Ohio Cooperative Education Conference on May 16, 2007, in Dayton, Ohio. Dan made a wonderful speech about the value of experiential education to his company and for workforce development in the state of Ohio. Later that day at a board meeting he attended, he was further recognized by his colleagues for this honor. CONGRATULATIONS TO OUR VERY DESERVING KETTERING AWARD WINNER!

Consider recognizing one of your long-time employers with the Charles F. Kettering Award

Charles F. Kettering was a trustee and benefactor of Antioch College and Research Director of the General Motors Corporation, as well as Chairman of the Thomas Alva Edison Foundation. Long an admirer of the values of cooperative education, he was disappointed with the lack of national attention to cooperative education's 50th anniversary celebration in 1956 and decided to do something about it.

From his influential position, he was able to charge the Edison Foundation with the responsibility to focus appropriate attention on cooperative education. This resulted in a national study of cooperative education's values. The study ultimately resulted in the formation of the National Commission for Cooperative Education with the purpose to promote the expansion of cooperative education. Until Kettering's involvement, there was no professional association promoting cooperative education's expansion. So, in a significant way, Kettering's intervention set into motion a new era in cooperative education, an era in which major efforts would be undertaken to expand cooperative education to institutions throughout the country. Eventually these endeavors resulted in Title VIII Federal funding.

Internship Student Achievement Award

Brad Klingsporn, Accounting, University of Central Arkansas

Employer: Government Accountability Office (GAO), Washington, DC

Brad Klingsporn served as an intern for the Government Accountability (GAO) Office in Washington, D.C. during the summer of 2006. The GAO is a legislative branch agency which serves as a watchdog for Congress and advises Senators and Representatives about the operations of various entities within the federal government.

Some of Brad's assignments at the GAO included:

- Assisting with an SEC audit;
- Researching/summarizing information about the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, the SEC, and Amtrak;
- Presenting recommendations from auditing activities to managers with the SEC; and
- Witnessing GAO representatives give testimonies before Senate committee.

Brad is a member of the University of Central Arkansas Honors College, studied in Finland for a semester, and has a cumulative Grade Point Average of 3.76. He was awarded UCA's Trustee scholarship and was selected as a member of the National Society of Collegiate Scholars.

from Steve Sellars, VP CEIA Internship Network

Brad was a key player in UCA's successful effort to create the world's largest Christmas stocking to hold donated gifts for needy children. He traveled to New York at the invitation of NBC's Today Show for an interview about the project.

Through Hurricane Katrina fundraising efforts, Brad became interested in improving the coordination of charitable efforts on campus. This interest led him to choose service learning for his Honor's College thesis. He also prepared a proposal to UCA's provost to create a full-time-faculty position to add a service learning component to UCA's curriculum and coordinate efforts campus-wide. As a result, a faculty committee has been formed to explore these possibilities.

Congratulations to CEIA Members Who Retired In 2007!

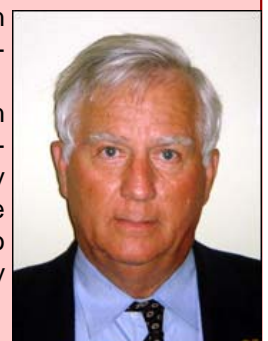

Dr. Freyda Lazarus, Director of the Center for Community-Based Learning at Montclair State University in Montclair, New Jersey and recipient of the Ralph W. Tyler Award in 1993, contributed over 30 years of service to the field. She has established campus-community partnerships and built the infrastructure to support the development of the Cooperative Education and Service-Learning programs. She has been at the forefront of public policy change by serving in leadership roles in national professional organizations (NJCEIA, CEA and NSEE) and advancing experiential education as chair of MSU's Senate Committee for Experiential Education. The author of 15 published articles, texts, and handbooks, she has offered over 30 workshops and training programs for academic and business decision-makers. She retired last month with fond memories of her colleagues in the field and how much she learned from them. She also mentored many of her colleagues in return.

Dr. Luther Epting also retired last month from his position as Director of the Mississippi State Career Center and Cooperative Education Program (previously as coordinator, assistant director, and associate director). He played a major role in the growth of their cooperative education program from some 300 "at-work" students per year to the current 1,100 "at-work" students annually.

Both were active CEIA members during their careers, participating in conferences and as presenters. Freyda chaired the CEIA Conference in Atlantic City during the height of Title VIII funding. Luther presented at many conferences, was on the Board for the Accreditation Council for Cooperative Education, an American Society for Engineering Education Fellow and also handled registration for many CEIA conferences. We wish them well as they embark on a new chapter in both of their lives!

Corwin Olson, right, receiving his award from Arnold Bell, VP of the CEIA Co-op Education Network

Cooperative Education Student Achievement Award

Corwin Olson, Aerospace Engineering, University of Texas at Austin

Employer: United Space Alliance, Houston, Texas

Corwin Olson completed four cooperative education terms within the Training Division of United Space Alliance at the Johnson Space Center (JSC). United Space Alliance is NASA's primary space operations contractor. During his tours, Corwin became a certified NASA instructor for two Daily Operations Group classes: Operations Local Area Network Malfunctions and Ops LAN Data Storage and Management. He taught these courses to numerous astronauts, including nearly the entire 2004 astronaut class. The 2004 astronaut class rated Corwin as one of the top four overall instructors in the Training Division. Corwin achieved the designation of Motion Control System GPS Subject Matter Expert and was awarded the division's Silver Gyro award for special achievement. He also served as a mentor for the SpaceTEC High School Student Job Shadowing program while at the JSC.

Corwin was also very active on the University of Texas at Austin campus. He was a member of the Wirelessly Integrated Pico-satellite (WIPsat) team, a student project to design a satellite to be launched into space. He was the Secretary of Sigma Gamma Tau, National Aerospace Honors Society, a member of Kappa Theta Epsilon, National Cooperative education Honor Society, Gamma Beta Phi Honors Society, and Society Representative to the Student Engineering Council. Corwin is an active volunteer for Habitat for Humanity and a third degree black belt instructor of Tae Kwon Do.

Corwin received his Bachelor of Science in Aerospace Engineering in May of 2007. He plans to pursue graduate studies in the fall.
